THE APPROACHING ECUMENICAL

When the Catholic bishops were gethered at Rome to celebrate the eighteenth centen-ary of the martyrdom of St. Peter, the Pope declared the uncountry of a general ecumen-leal council, and on the 29th of June, 1868. the feast of the Apostles Peter and Paul, letters were addressed to all the bishops of the Catholic Church throughout the world summoning them to attend the council on the 5th day of December, 1809. As the day approaches, the subject is discussed by the press, not only in Europe but in the United States, which will be represented in the council by nearly all the archibatops and bishops of the Catholic Church in this

The latest advices from Rome indicate that preparations are being made on a scale commensurate with the importance of such an event. There have been eighteen commenced councils held, the first at Nice in 325, the last known as the Council of Trent, convened in 1545. convened in 1545.

It is only in a general council, represent

The solemn essions where the decrees are promulgated re distinguished from the congregations where they are elaborated. The prelater convoked were notified several years since by allocutions of the Pope that it was his intention to hold a general council, and accordingly to prepare for the occasion counels of their experience gained in different parts of the world for the needs of the pec ple they would represent. The commis-sions or congregations composed of cardinals and theologians, thosan from the ogians, chosen from different na tions, were appointed in 1957 to prepare the questions which will be considered in concil. There is for instance a special cooges gation upon dogmatic theology, one upon canon law, one to consider the various ques-tions concerning religious orders, one to discuss the relations of Church and State, one upon the churches of the East, one upon Church ceremonies and one upon ec

In commenting upon the above the Pope tys: "It is necessary for us to use every in commenting upon the above the Pope says: "It is necessary for us to use every exertion that, by God's help, we may sepa-rate every evil from the Church and society, to lead back into the straight way of truth, justice and saivation those unfortunate peo-ple who have wandered from it; to represe yies and refute error, so that our august re-ligion and its salutary doctrine may acquire a new vigor throughout the world; that it may be extended further every day; that it regain its empire, and thus that plety, hon-esty, justice, charity, and all Christian virtues may be strengthened and flourish for the greatest good of humanity."

This is the entire programme of the work of the approaching council, and all conjectures or reports as to what particular dogmats to the folialists, or what particular acts are to be defined, have their origin outside the authorny of the official gazette. generally known that our form of government was elaborated from that of the Swiss Republic, while the general outlines of the latter were the grand ideas of 8t. Thomas Aquinus, the most profound of the theologians of the Catholic Church. The idea of religious toleration in the Colonial times was after practically observed by the Maryland colonists, and their representatives urged its incorporation in the framing of the constitution. Again, it is well understood that under our form of government as hierarchy is incompatible with the interests of the Catholic Church in this country, so that it will always remain as now, composed of provinces subdivided into dioceses, presided over by archbishops and bishops. What may be determined upon respecting eccients and the respective eccients of the Catholic Church in the industry, so that it will always remain as now, composed of provinces subdivided into dioceses, presided over by archbishops and bishops. What may be determined upon respecting eccients and the industry is the United States.

On the other hand the influence of the American bishops will undoubtedly be felt, particularly as the prelates of the Catholic Church in Engiand will unite with them in presenting their views of political and social economy, and their relations to the growth of Christian civilization in every part of the world.

When General Braddock's army marched

When General Braddock's army marched from Alexandria to Fort Duquesce. It encamped at the month of what is now called "Sir John's Bun," so-called in honor of Sir John Sinclair, a quartermaster in that army. At that time the springs were in ase by the Indians and the water was regarded by the Indians and the water was regarded by them as promotive of health.

These springs are known to have been the first fashionable watering place in this country, being used as such as early as 1705, more than one hundred years ago.

The colonial legislature of Virginia in 1770 passed an and establishing a town, out of a grant of land made the colony by Lord Fairfax, of which the following is the preamble:

Whereas, it hath been represented to the general seambly, that the laying off off fifty area of land in lots and streets for a town at leay, will be accommodating anamhers of indra, who frequent those spring yearly for the recovery of their health.

These lots are now owned by Hon. Wm. P. Dole, commissioner of Indian affairs under the administration of Mr. Lincoin, and upon which he has crected an elegant cottage for a summer residence.

The water is light, sparkling and tasteless, and at a temperature of 76 deg, winter and summer. The creek formed by it does not freeze during winter, thus adding to its value for manufacturing purposes.

The improvements are two hotels, one of which will accommodate four hundred visitors; a gentleman's bath-house, containing ten bathing rooms. The baths are of cement, twolve feet long, five foct wide and thirty feet wide and the swimming hath of the control of th

I have been compared to the Treasury Department by Secretary Boutvell. The bonorable gentlemans, like he predecessors in office, has been accused of allowing, intinations of his dinacial policy to "leak" for the bonefit of certain specialtors. Certain newspapers have his instanted that he has been governed by venal motives, and to him is attributed a want of sufficient of the Government. Those who have met and know Mr. Boutwell are in a better position to judge him than are in a better position to judge him than are these prolife fillagers of link, who, for merceture of the sufficient of the Government has not one in ten of the Secretary's defauners have either over seen or conversed with Mr. Boutwell, and from the Ignorance displayed in their criticisms on his policy, it is afe to assume that none of them are aware of the business of the Treasury br the requisite requirements for a head of the institution. The gross and unwarranted attacks on the Secretary are only equalled by the evident midic and ignorance of those who make them.

Mr. Boutwell has been accused of an endeavor to create a stringency for money, and the accuration and the accurately have been accused of an endeavor to create a stringency for money, and the accurate a stringency for money, and

Secretary are only equalled by the evident malice and ignorance of those who make them.

Mr. Boutwell has been accused of an endeavor to create a stringency for money, and the accumulation of a large currency balance in the Transury has been politide to as an indication of his attempt, while it is well known to those familiar with the subject that it has been entirely beyond. Mr. Boutwell's control to prevent the accumulation that has occurred. A few facts on the subject will best serve to expose the ignorance and malice that have so unjustly assailed the minister of finance.

The Secretary has been censured for selling gold for currency and thereby drawing funds from active use into the vaults of the Treasury. In answer to this, and successful contradiction is impossible, we reply, he has disbursed more currency for the bonds the hasp unclassed than he has realised from the sales of gold, while his predecessor never bought bonds at all. The extraordinary amount of curroncy now in the Treasury is to be accounted for, from the fact that the internal revenue receipts exceeded by eighteen millions the estimates of Mr. K. A. Rollins, late Commissioner. No sensible man can accuse Mr. Boutwell of venality or imbeelility for this. The Secretary could not disburse, as against the appropriations for the Government had eth susted their respective appropriations for the facial year a month before its close, and each department was compelled to wait to make its drafts on the Treasury, as against the appropriation for the Government had eth susted their respective appropriations of politics. It has been our plantary to a provide the provisions of the sinking fand act of 1862. His predecessors in office failed to do what he has done. He views the access of the receipts, and as the funda are disseminated an easier condition of the money market will cranse.

Instead of censure, Mr. Boutwell should be the recipient of praise for his bold action in carrying out the provisions of politics. It has been our plantary to be a politic the whole country will soon hall his manage-ment of the flunces as a success, and it is to be hoped that party rancor will be lost sight of in general admiration of at least one of General Grant's cabinet. C. R. C.
